

Line and Hatching Exercises

This worksheet proposes you simple yet effective exercises. Embed them into your creative routine, use them as a warm-up, and have fun!

1. Draw continuous lines, varying the pressure and speed of drawing. Pay attention to the starting and the ending points of the lines.

Spontaneous intervals are welcome, too—as long as you know what you're doing!

2. Draw some dashed lines!

3. Draw a reference line, then add hatches; leaving a gap is up to you.

4. Create a line that consists of dots; it may be continuous or broken.

5. Draw a wavy line and a zigzag line.

6. Draw relaxed, spontaneous lines. Find your rhythm and enjoy the process!

7. Fill the forms below with hatches, basing on the example. You can vary the direction of the hatches.

1

2

3

8. Create layers of hatches that have the same direction.

9. Create the cross-hatching samples.

10. Create a transition from a lighter to a darker value with cross-hatching.

Additional templates for the line practice

---

---